Journeyworks COVID-19 Update

In these unusual and changing times, we wanted to provide an update on how Journeyworks Publishing is responding to the COVID-19 pandemic.

We are very aware that the majority of our customers are on the frontlines of the COVID-19 response and we are incredibly grateful for your hard work, dedication, commitment and sacrifices.

We are currently keeping our website and online store open, in order to continue to provide our health education print materials (including materials on COVID-19 and infectious disease prevention) to our customers. We will continue to process and ship orders, and respond to phones, fax and email.

As we do so, we are taking measures to comply with local, regional, state and federal recommendations to slow the spread of COVID-19 – and prioritize the health and well-being of our staff, our customers, and our local AND global community.

We believe print materials can play a critical role in the response to emerging public health threats like COVID-19. They can help reach people who lack regular access to high-speed internet, especially in vulnerable populations such as older adults. Pamphlets and other print materials also help cut through the “digital noise” and they can help to reduce fear and panic by providing clear, fact-based information from trusted sources. And print materials serve as a resource that readers can refer back to, display and share with others.

Please check out our website for new COVID-19 titles as well as other infectious disease prevention materials – we will be updating this section regularly, as we develop new materials and update existing titles.

As always, in the event of any service or stock delays, our excellent customer team will notify you right away and let you know about options and alternatives. Please let us know if we can be of assistance or support to your organization during this time.

Thank you for all you do to protect public health. We’re with you, and we’re in this together.
